

I believe in the freedom of speech and the right of others to make a living. However, my privacy, my right not to have my homelife interrupted by anyone, solicitors or charities, is sacred. I do not support the argument of charities that without telemarketing they will not prosper, I will not give money to charities who call on my phone. Please do not lower the standard from the current Indiana Ordinance. I am a working mother and my time at home is too precious to have to answer phone calls from annoying people or turn my phone off completely and only subscribe to cellular service. Think hard on your decision. Do you like the insidiousness of these phone calls at your home?
